2008 LASSO MEETING TO BE HELD IN CORVALLIS, OREGON

Is Corvallis in the Southwest?

A quick perusal of recent LASSO conference programs and membership lists reveals that the organization has grown beyond its original status as a modestly-sized regional association and acquired a significant national and international presence. This year LASSO again transcends its geographical boundaries with its first conference in the Pacific Northwest.

Corvallis, Oregon and the surrounding Willamette Valley communities may at first appear to have little in common with past LASSO venues, but further examination reveals significant historical and linguistic connections that unite Oregon and the Southwest. These connections began well before European settlement as evidenced by the eastern Oregon residents who speak Northern Paiute, currently the northernmost member of the Uto-Aztecan language family. Later, before the Mexican American War resulted in Mexico's cession of the southwest states, Oregon shared a border with Mexico. That border moved south long ago, but social and economic circumstances have converged in the past few decades to create an area of linguistic and cultural complexity that increasingly resembles the Southwest experience, if perhaps with a twist or two related to the historical presence of immigrant communities from Asia and eastern Europe.

As in the Southwest, the meeting of diverse cultures and languages has not always gone smoothly. Monolingual English speakers are puzzled by the amount of Spanish that is now visible across the state, and even more puzzled by communities like Woodburn, where shops with signs in Spanish stand next to businesses that serve Russian-speaking Old Believer families from Turkey. Politicians have exploited ethnic tensions, as in a recent controversy in Portland over the naming of a street in honor of César Chávez that pitted Latino organizers against Chinese businesses. And like the Southwest, Oregon is sadly turning into something of a linguistic graveyard for indigenous peoples. We invite the LASSO membership to come and experience firsthand the changes—and challenges—facing this new zone of linguistic and cultural contact.

Conference Theme and Program Highlights

As linguists and educators committed to public engagement, the Corvallis conference planning team has developed an interest in the effects of language on social and political attitudes and behaviors that goes beyond simple academic curiosity. In the spirit of exploring this connection further, the theme for the conference will be “Building Communities and Making Connections.” The keynote address will be delivered by James Crawford, a well-known expert on the politics of language and former executive director of the National Association for Bilingual Education. A special symposium will also take place during the Corvallis conference honoring the work of Garland Bills, a linguist whose service to the profession and to the Spanish-speaking communities of New Mexico and the greater Southwest is legendary. Finally, this meeting also marks the birth of a special interest group called “Making Connections beyond the Academic Community” that will allow us to continue our conversation about community building beyond the 2008 conference.

Because a primary goal of the meeting is to encourage dialog between the academic world and local communities, LASSO members will be joined by the local public for the keynote address. Conference participants will in turn be provided with tickets in their registration packets to a special Corvallis Symphony concert featuring music celebrating Hispanic heritage and the Trombones de Costa Rica ensemble. The concert will be held immediately following the Presidential Reception on Friday evening.

Abstracts for the conference may now be submitted to LASSO2008@gmail.com. Papers or posters in any area of linguistics are welcome, although proposals related to the conference theme are particularly encouraged. Following the success of the sessions held during the Denver conference, proposals for complete panels with 2-4 speakers will again be welcome. Deadline for submission of all proposals is June 1, 2008, but early submission of panel proposals is desirable. Remember that student papers can be considered for the Helmut Esau Prize, a $250 cash award made annually by LASSO for the best student paper.

Local Attractions

Corvallis sits on the banks of the Willamette River about halfway between Eugene and Salem, just ten miles or so off the I-5 corridor. The downtown riverfront area is some 15-20 blocks from the conference venues and has a number of restaurants and parks. The weather in October is somewhat unpredictable, but generally ranges from a light drizzle to spectacular blue autumn skies. High temperatures are usually in the mid 60s or above with lows in the upper 40s, so the best option is to dress in layers if you want to go out walking.

The city is located about an hour's drive away from the town of Newport, a picturesque coastal community with beaches, OSU research facilities, the renowned Oregon Coast Aquarium, and a number of parks and official scenic areas. The Cascade Range lies just 30 miles to the east and provides opportunities for hiking and camping. For those more interested in a more cosmopolitan environment, Portland has a thriving arts community, an active night life and, perhaps even more importantly for the LASSO crowd, it is the site of Powell's Books, one of the most spectacular new and used book dealers on the west coast.

Travel Information

Corvallis does not have direct commercial airline service, but may be reached by flying into either the Portland International Airport (PDX) or the closer and much more manageable Eugene Airport (EUG). Eugene is served primarily by United and Horizon/AlaskaAir, and Portland is served by nearly all major carriers. For a change of pace, it may be worth investigating the Amtrak Coast Starlight which originates in Los Angeles and makes a stop in the town of Albany, just 12 miles from the OSU campus.

Ground transportation between Portland and Corvallis is available through Hut Shuttle (1-888-257-0126) and costs around $85 per person for a round trip ticket. Transportation from Eugene is currently available through OmniShuttle (1-800-741-5097), which is a shared-ride service that charges $50 for the first person plus an additional $5.00 for each additional person on the same reservation. OmniShuttle requires that reservations be made at least 72 hours in advance. Both airports offer car rental services. Please keep in mind that the distance between PDX and the OSU campus is approximately 110 miles and the distance from Eugene roughly 50 miles, so private taxis will not be a cost-effective option for most people.

Accommodations

The official conference hotel is the Hilton Garden Inn Corvallis, located on the south edge of campus just across the street from the conference center where the keynote and presidential addresses will be held. Special rates of $102 per room are available between October 16, 2008 and October 19, 2008. Rooms at this rate will be available until September 10, 2008 or until the block reserved for LASSO is sold out. Please visit the LASSO XXXVII web site for a direct reservation link to the Hilton Garden Inn Corvallis. There you may also find information on other local lodging options.

Contact Information

All of this information and more is available on the conference web site at:

http://oregonstate.edu/dept/foreign_lang/lasso.

Program arrangements are the responsibility of the LASSO Vice-President and President-Elect Susana Rivera-Mills. All proposals for papers, special sessions, panels, or other program features should be submitted to her at LASSO2008@gmail.com. Questions regarding local arrangements or the conference web site may be directed to local arrangements chair Juan Antonio Trujillo at the same address.

Abstract submissions are invited for paper presentations, poster presentations, and panels on any research area related to language issues of special interest in the Southwest. In addition, proposals on the conference theme are particularly encouraged, and may include, but are not limited to: connecting language with non-academic areas, interdisciplinary collaborations, language learning communities, education and language policy, and non-traditional dissemination of language research.

In addition a Special Interest Group (SIG) on Making Connections Beyond the Academic Community is encouraging presentations on that topic. Please indicate in the abstract if you would like to be considered under this SIG.

Presentations are generally given in Spanish or English, although special provisions may be made to support the use of endangered languages that have been excluded historically from academic discourse. Presentations should be given in the same language as the abstract.

Paper presentations will be limited to 20 minutes followed by a 10 minute question period.

Poster presentations will be organized into informal poster sessions where presenters can distribute hand-outs, explain posters, and answer questions.

Panels should be composed of 2-4 speakers. Early submission of panel proposals is desirable.

2007 HELMUT ESAU PRIZE

Congratulations to Daniel Sanford of the University of New Mexico, winner of the 2007 Helmut Esau Prize. Daniel received the award for his paper “Metaphor and Phonological Reduction in English Idiomatic Expressions”.

LASSO is very proud of all of our student members and encourages them to not only present their research at our annual meeting, but to also participate in the contest for the Esau Prize.

To be eligible for the Helmut Esau Prize, students must first present at the Annual Meeting and then submit a revised version of their paper to the LASSO Vice President. The prize is awarded to the best of all high-quality submissions received. Recipients of this prestigious prize receive a $250 cash award.

Students who hope to have their abstracts accepted for the meeting in Corvallis should plan now to enter the Esau competition. To be considered for the 2008 Esau Prize, polished, article-length manuscripts should be sent to Susana Rivera-Mills (see mailing address above) following our fall meeting and must be in her hands by January 1, 2009.

This award is named in honor of Helmut Esau, who was active in the early days of LASSO. Professor Esau died in an automobile accident shortly after he was elected to the LASSO presidency, and his colleagues at the time established the Esau Award to commemorate his contributions to the Linguistic Association of the Southwest and to the profession at large.

THE SOUTHWEST JOURNAL OF LINGUISTICS

Joint Editors Pamela Anderson-Mejías and Hugo Mejías at the University of Texas Pan-American are accepting manuscripts for consideration for publication during 2008-2009. Four hard copies of your manuscript may be forwarded to them at the following address: Pamela Anderson-Mejías and Hugo A. Mejías, Joint Editors, Southwest Journal of Linguistics, Department of Modern Languages, University of Texas—Pan American, 1201 University Drive, Edinburg, Texas, 78541, USA. Manuscripts may also be sent electronically to swjlasso@utpa.edu, but must also be accompanied by hard copies to the above mailing address.

EDITORIAL SCOPE

The journal publishes papers across a broad range of topics in linguistics, though research papers dealing with the languages of the southwestern United States and northern Mexico are especially encouraged. The journal also publishes scholarly reviews of the literature, book reviews, and occasional commentary on topics of concern to the journal's readership. Proposals for thematic issues and nominations for guest editors are invited.

INSTRUCTIONS FOR CONTRIBUTORS

Manuscripts are to be prepared according to the Language style sheet, published annually in the December LSA Bulletin and available at:

<http://www.lsadc.org/info/pubs-lang-style.cfm>

In addition to meeting Language requirements, Southwest Journal of Linguistics contributors should also:

- Prepare manuscripts using Word, WordPerfect or another common word processing program for PC or Mac. Contact the editor for guidance in using special symbols.
- Submit manuscripts in either English or Spanish.
- Include an abstract in English of between 100 and 150 words.
- Submit four hard copies of the manuscript. Once a manuscript has been accepted for publication, the revised manuscript must be submitted in both hard copy and on diskette.

Given the comprehensive goal of the journal, attention is drawn particularly to the Language style sheet provision that contributors provide the names and addresses of appropriate referees.

THANK YOU, DENVER!

Denver was the site of the 36th Annual Meeting of the Linguistic Association of the Southwest which boasted the theme "Linguistic Legacies". The meeting was sponsored by the University of Colorado Denver Modern Languages Department, the University of Colorado at Boulder Spanish & Portuguese Department, and the University of Colorado President's Fund for the Humanities. Special thanks go out to Devin Jenkins, the Local Arrangements Chair, and David Eddington, the LASSO Vice President and Program Chair.

The 2007 meeting featured nearly 110 presenters, including a number from international venues. There were three special sessions on 150 Years of Texas German, two special sessions on Experimental Approaches to Second Language Phonology, and special sessions on Code Switching and Stylistic Variation, and Academic Writing and Publishing. In addition, there were special panel sessions on Spanish in the U.S. Research as a Living Legacy: Making Connections, and Natural Language Processing Activities in the Southwest. Kati Pletsch de García, of Texas A&M International University gave the Presidential Address entitled "¡Ala! Linguistic innovation and the blending of cultures on the South Texas border". We were fortunate to have Carmen Silva-Corvalán of the University of Southern California deliver the plenary address, "Early Spanish-English bilingualism: Theoretical issues, empirical analyses.” The musical group The Freudian Slips, featuring Diane Dansereau, Chair of UCDHSC Modern Languages, provided a delightful performance at Friday evening’s presidential reception.
